Dear Hiring Team,

It started with my brother and I making worlds in our basement. We went to space as astronauts, to castles as knights, even to the stone age as dinosaurs. We captured those tales by borrowing our dad's camcorder - cardboard sets and all. A kid can be limited by budget, but never by imagination, and I'm glad that as time went on and I got older, I never lost mine.

It's what has given me chances to work at Oscar Winning Production Companies, collaborate with legends of the NFL, and film stories about countries all over the world.

I've learned a great deal working alongside my fellow co-workers, managers, and executives over the years. Connections and relationships are what make this business, and I will continue to cherish every single one.

Whether it's a set, office, or editing lab - I hope to collaborate with other creative minds, perfect my craft, help tell compelling stories, and enjoy the journey. To that end, I am actively seeking opportunities to be part of stories that help better this world and the lives of others.

The question is: does that opportunity lie with your company?

Sincerely,
